

Dear FCC ---- I love my satellite radio!! For the first time ever I can get great reception while driving the country roads where I live and actually hear music I enjoy. Not just a few tunes now then, interrupted by noisy commercials that prompt me to put in a cd, but whole stations of classical or jazz or folk music that I would NEVER hear on commercial radio. And again I say, NEVER!!! I am very upset to think the commercial bradcasters want to silence satellite radio. If they want me back, then need to improve the quality of their programs, not just bully others because they aren't as mediocre. I love the fact that satellite radio offers a gamut of choices and programs -- news, national weather, talk shows, and of course the music. The only other station I listen to now is Public Radio, which I hope some day satellite will be able to broadcast too. I pay for my satellite radio and that is my choice to do so. I choose to do this because the quality is worth it.
